Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The Director of the Seattle, Washington district office denied the immigrant visa petition and the matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner filed the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600) on November 4, 1999. The petitioner is a 34-year-old married citizen of the United States. The beneficiary is 17 years old at the present time and was born in India on June 14, 1985.

The district director denied the petition, finding that the petitioner had failed to establish that the beneficiary is an orphan as defined in the Immigration and Nationality Act.

On appeal, counsel for the petitioner submits additional documentation in the form of a letter. Counsel for the petitioner requested 60 days to submit additional evidence. More than two years have lapsed and no additional evidence has been submitted.

Section 101(b)(1)(F) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(b)(1)(F)(i), defines orphan in pertinent part as:

a child, under the age of sixteen at the time a petition is filed in his behalf to accord a classification as an immediate relative under section 201(b), who is an orphan because of the death or disappearance of, abandonment or desertion by, or separation or loss from, both parents, or for whom the sole or surviving parent is incapable of providing the proper care and has in writing irrevocably released the child for emigration and adoption; who has been adopted abroad by a United States citizen and spouse jointly, or by an unmarried United States citizen at least twenty-five years of age, who personally saw and observed the child prior to or during the adoption proceedings; or who is coming to the United States for adoption by a United States citizen and spouse jointly, or by an unmarried United States citizen at least twenty-five years of age, who have or has complied with the preadoption requirements, if any, of the child's proposed residence . . . .

The evidence is not sufficient to establish abandonment.

Abandonment by both parents is a defined term in the regulations. 8 C.F.R. § 204.3(b) states, in pertinent part:

Abandonment by both parents means that the parents have willfully forsaken all parental rights, obligations, and claims to the child, as well as all control over and possession of the child, without intending to transfer, or without transferring, these rights to any specific person(s). Abandonment must include not only the intention to surrender all parental rights, obligations, and claims to the child, and control over and possession of the child, but also the actual act of surrendering such rights, obligations, claims, control, and possession. A relinquishment or release by the parents to the prospective adoptive parents or for a specific adoption does not constitute abandonment. Similarly, the relinquishment or release of the child by the parents to a third party for custodial care in anticipation of, or preparation for, adoption does not constitute abandonment unless the third party (such as a governmental agency, a court of competent jurisdiction, an adoption agency, or an orphanage) is authorized under the child welfare laws of the foreign-sending country to act in such a capacity. A child who is placed temporarily in an orphanage shall not be considered to be abandoned if the parents express an intention to retrieve the child, are contributing or attempting to contribute to the support of the child, or otherwise exhibit ongoing parental interest in the child. A child who has been given unconditionally to an orphanage shall be considered to be abandoned.

On appeal, counsel for the petitioner argues that the beneficiary has been abandoned by both his parents because they cannot provide for him.

The beneficiary cannot be considered to have been abandoned by both parents as that term is defined in 8 C.F.R. § 204.3(b) because the biological parents did not forsake their parental rights to the beneficiary. The applicable regulation requires the biological parents to forsake their parental rights, obligations, and claims to their child without intending to transfer, or without transferring their rights to any specific person(s). In fact, the beneficiary resides with his biological parents.

There is no documentation in the record to show that a third party (e.g., a government agency, a court of competent jurisdiction, an adoption agency or an orphanage) that was authorized under the child welfare laws of India to act in such a capacity ever had custody of the beneficiary because the biological parents relinquished or released their parental rights to such a third party. Simply going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for the purpose of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972). As already noted, the evidence presently in the record shows that the beneficiary resides in the custody of his parents.

It is not enough to claim inability to provide for a child to establish that the child has been abandoned by both parents.

The beneficiary has not been deserted.

Desertion by both parents means that the parents have willfully forsaken their child and have refused to carry out their parental rights and obligations and that, as a result, the child has become a ward of a competent authority in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country.

8 C.F.R. § 204.3(b) (definition of desertion). The beneficiary's biological parents cannot be said to have "deserted" him. The beneficiary, as noted, resides with his biological parents. The beneficiary has never been and is not currently a ward of a competent authority in India. Therefore, the beneficiary has not been deserted by both parents as that term is defined in the governing regulations.

The beneficiary's parents have not disappeared.

Disappearance of both parents means that both parents have unaccountably or inexplicably passed out of the child's life, their whereabouts are unknown, there is no reasonable hope of their reappearance, and there has been a reasonable effort to locate them as determined by a competent authority in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country.

8 C.F.R. § 204.3(b) (definition of disappearance). The beneficiary's biological parents cannot be said to have "disappeared" because there is no evidence on the record that they have passed out of the beneficiary's life.

Conclusion.

In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proof rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden; it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that the beneficiary is eligible for classification as an orphan pursuant to section 101(b)(1)(F) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(b)(1)(F).
